THE ONLY WEAPONS THIS SMART I'VE SEEN ARE OUR B.A.T. DESIGNS, AND DESTRO WAS ONLY ABLE TO GET THOSE FUNCTIONAL USING ENERGON AS A POWER SOURCE.
THESE CAN'T BE THAT SMART. THIS ROCKET THAT ALMOST HIT DESTRO WAS A DUD.

And so concludes another thrilling issue of DESTRO…Flagg and Destro together?! I'll bet that wasn't on your bingo card haha…editor Ben Abernathy back again joined this month by the master of mayhem himself, Dan Watters!

Thanks Ben. I'm definitely adding 'master of mayhem' to my business card. Hope you all had as much fun with this issue as Destro did. Shot, blown up, left to walk through a blizzard, and he still reaches the final page with a smile on his face. Perhaps we should all aim to be a little more like Destro. (But probably not.)

Let's dive into this month's mailbag!

Dear Dan Watters, Andrei Bressan, Robert Kirkman, Ben Abernathy, and everyone involved with crafting Destro's presence in the Energon Universe. I must say, I loved Destro and it's impressive that a newcomer pulled it off this well (Yeah I listened to the Talking Joe interview). I particularly liked Destro's depiction as a calculating and ruthless force, but one that has a noble side to him. I also liked the inclusion of Darklon in the story. I hope to see more Iron Grenadiers like Metal-Head in future issues, I know revealing what Iron Grenadiers appear in future issues is probably a trade secret. I also love how well Tomax & Xamot are portrayed in the comic even having them finish each other's sentences. The scene in Sierra Gordo with Tomax & Xamot reminded me of Mike Costa's COBRA series which used Tomax & Xamot as main villains. I'm curious did that series influence Tomax & Xamot's characterization in this comic or is that just me making that connection all on my own. Overall loved the story, and I look forward to more issues.

I am curious of a few things one the business side. Firstly, can we expect to see more character focused miniseries after Scarlett & Destro, or will we just get an ongoing run about the G.I. Joe Team after these series come to an end. Secondly, I'm curious can we expect to see Duke, Destro, Scarlett, and Cobra Commander get collected into Ultimate Collections like Invincible and Oblivion Song were? Or are Ultimate Collections reserve for ongoing titles like Void Rivals and Transformers? So these will only have trade paperbacks like Brit, Tech Jacket, and Guarding the Globe had (yeah, I'm a big Invincible fan in addition to a big G.I. Joe fan).

Sincerely,
Scotty

Thanks for reading and taking the time to write in, Scotty, and we're thrilled you're enjoying the series! To your first question: I hope you know the answer now--a G.I. JOE monthly is coming in November from our acclaimed DUKE team of Joshua Williamson and Tom Reilly! And for the second question: Who knows what the future might hold for future reprints of the minis so you'll have to stay tuned…

Glad you enjoyed the first issue, Scotty. I can't say I've read that particular book--my research was more on the end of the Real American Hero show and earlier in the Hama run; especially since we're entering the Energon Universe at this early date. Keep your eyes peeled for more Iron Grenadiers and Darklon in future issues. We have plans for them. All sunshine and puppy dogs, naturally.

Dear Dan,

For the first time in comics history, Laird James McCullen Destro XXIV gets his own title, however limited it may be! It is great to see a fresh take on this character prior to joining the ranks of Cobra's High Command.

Andrei Bressan's bold art has the Battle Android Troopers looking as menacing as ever! I know in the original 80s Sunbow cartoon, the B.A.T.s were the invention of Dr. Mindbender and Scrap-Iron, but it is nice to see them firmly established as M.A.R.S. technology in the Energon Universe.

You have done an excellent job showcasing the constant tension amongst this cast of characters, given their varied and often conflicting agendas.

I was particularly impressed with how you handled Tomax and Xamot. Mercer is a personal favorite of mine and I even caught a glimpse of Scrap-Iron!

You mentioned Action Man as part of your upbringing in the U.K. I am curious, did you also grow up with Red Jackal in the pages of Battle Action Force and his eventual transformation into Destro? I wonder if your take on Destro might have any traces of that character in him.

This premiere issue was on fire, quite literally! Keep the rocket fuel coming!

Sincerely,
Laird Michael Patrick Nie I

Thanks for writing in, Michael! I can't wait to see what you think of the last few issues!

Battle Action Force was a little before my time--the might of Wikipedia tells me it ran until 1986, which was five years before I was born. Working out what separated the Crimson Twins from Destro very much gave me the crux of what the story was about, so you'll see that dial up as the story continues. This is 'business for the sake of war' vs 'war for the sake of business'…so expect plenty more rocket fuel to be burned in the process.

Destro Team,

I hope this doesn't sound like patronizing a writer for doing their job but, despite Dan Watters claiming to be new to G.I. Joe, he writes the characters like he's always known them! That bitter working relationship between Cobra Commander and Destro, Destro playing revolutionary if it turns a profit and the Crimson Twins arguing semantics with a soldier they killed one minute later are all dynamics and traits I've come to love as far back as the 80s cartoon and were a joy to read in 2024.

That said, I hope Mr. Watters gets to write heroes more often because if my coworkers consistently saw me as "the villain guy," I'd probably wonder if that's a bad thing too and I'm sure that Mr. Watters, unlike Destro, has some good in him.

Keep Doing Clan Destro Proud,
Sean Taylor

Thanks for writing in, Sean, and I'd love to have Dan write some heroes for us, too…but dang, he's SO good with the villains haha.

Definitely not patronizing, Sean—it's always good to hear the characters voices work for those who love them.. Those scenes were indeed particular favourites of mine to write in issue 1.

And hey, I love to write heroes too! They can end up splattered with just as much blood as the bad guys…

--Dan

All right, that's a wrap for this month's letters! Please keep them coming and we'll see you here next month…when the you-know-what REALLY hits the fan…mwahahah!

--Ben
